SEE THEMSELVES IN NOVELS

Common Fault of Many Citizens is to Imagine Themselves Portrayed.

Tragedies like the murder of David Graham Phillips are uncommon. Singular this, for the average citizen is always being written up by novelists, and knows it. Whenever he discovers a particularly obnoxious character in a novel he cries excitedly, "That's me!" Realizing how unimaginative the novelists are, and how lazy, he sees that they aren't going to waste energy inventing characters when a person of his utility is right in the foreground of the universe.

You will notice, too, that the cry of "That's me!" generally enjoys an accompaniment of vigorous kicks and screams, as who would say, "That's me to a dot, and by Jiminy, and it doesn't resemble me in any particular! Horrors! This unrecognizable caricature makes me odious and ridiculous in the eyes of all Christendom. I am ruined."

Despite his kicks and screams, the average citizen relishes being flayed by a novelist. It confers distinction. It is as agreeable, nearly, as being bitten by a multi-millionaire's bulldog. Nearly, but not quite, as being bitten by a multi-millionaire's bulldog, you can exhibit the bite and prove your eminence. When flayed by a novelist you are disgustingly confronted with Dakota Dams from all over creation who insist they are you.

GOOD ARRANGEMENT.

Tom--You take the arm-chair, Pearl.
Pearl--No, you take it.
Tom--Well, suppose we both take it?

HOG ARISTOCRATS.

There is an aristocracy in hogs, not including the street car and public assembly variety. In Ohio it has been discovered that hogs fed on a brain-producing diet and reared under sanitary conditions are more cleanly and furnish pork of a higher quality than others. The experiment lasted a year at the state experimental station. Forty hogs were reared in modern sanitary pens and fed specially upon prepared grain. Some months after this treatment, when let loose from the pens, these hogs refused to associate with the common swine. They were killed, and their meat has been pronounced by experts to be the most succulent and tender pork ever known.

GEORGIA PHILOSOPHY.

Since you were not on hand to give Providence instructions when the world was in the making, why growl about the gait it is going, forever finding fault, and roaming around with a candle when the sun is shining? The old world doesn't turn to look at the greatest man in the country, and all the growling you can do can't whitewash one black spot on the face of the sun. Why not join the jelly procession and whistle the clouds away?--Atlanta Constitution.

WOMAN AMBULANCE SURGEON.

Dr. Elizabeth Bryn has taken up her duties as an ambulance surgeon in New York, this being the second woman in that city who has done such work. She is a graduate of the Cornell medical school and in her examination for the position came out ahead of 40 men. She has had a three months' course in jiu-jitsu in preparation for her work.

CAUSTIC COMMENT.

"Thinks he's some orator, eh?"
"He expects to draw the people like rats."
"Well, maybe he will. He sure is a piece of cheese."

EASIEST METHOD THE BEST

Tale of Two Women Who Had Trouble With the Inquisitive Census Enumerator.

"I had a good deal of trouble with that census enumerator," said Mrs. Terwilliger. When he called for the blank he had left at the house he said it hadn't been filled out properly. Then he began to ask a lot of impertinent questions about things that didn't concern him in the least.

"I told him it was nobody's business how old I was, and whether there was a mortgage on the property or not and all that sort of thing. But he insisted on knowing. He even made threats. I declare, I thought I never would get rid of him. He staid half an hour, and when he went away at last he said he'd come again when my husband was at home, and those questions would be answered or he'd know the reason why."

"Well," remarked Mrs. Jerrold, "that shows that you didn't know how to manage him."

"Did he come to your house, too?"
"Yes, but he wasn't there five minutes. I hadn't the least bit of trouble with him."

"How did you manage him?"
"Why, I answered all his questions civilly."--Youth's Companion.

SIMPLY A LAW OF NATURE

Momentum of Heavier Object Moving Through Air is a Matter of Course.

If two objects having the same size and shape, but different in weight or mass, are thrown with the same initial velocity, the heavier one has more momentum. The momentum of a moving object is proportional to its mass and to its velocity. The meaning of the term may be understood by remembering that a heavy ball is harder to stop than a light ball if both are moving at the same velocity. These two objects of the same size, but of unequal masses, meet with the same resistance and therefore the momentum of the lighter body is sooner overcome. That is the reason that the lighter body cannot be thrown so far starting with the same initial velocity as can a heavier body. More than that, within certain limits the heavier body can be given, with the same power, equal, if not greater, initial velocity. For example: In throwing, the arm can be swung with more effect with a stone in the hand than with a feather.

WELCOME REFORM.

Says a man who has recently discovered that his better half has taken advantage of the concealing grace of a tunic drapery to have two real and welcome pockets inserted in the under portion of the skirt on several of her full frocks:

"The return of the prodigal, the return from Elba, are as nothing to the latest return of the pocket to women. The affairs mentioned have created some slight stir in the world, but this threatens to create a revolution. In future a conversation with a woman friend will not include picking up her pocket handkerchief at least three times. When one takes out one's wife she will not cry out at every turn: "Oh dear, where is my bag? I must have dropped it in the cab or the shop." Those who wish to keep women down should never have allowed pockets to them. Properly considered, the possession of a pocket is a greater stride on the path of independence than the winning of the vote."

NOW WORKS IN AN OFFICE.

Mrs. M. L. Baldwin, who is the granddaughter of a Chippewa chief, is now one of the adjusters of Indian affairs in the office of the secretary of the interior at Washington. Until she was fourteen years of age she slept in an Indian tepee and lived as all Indians did at that time. Her father was a French Huguenot and was a judge, while his daughter was well educated.

MAN TO THE RESCUE.

A Brooklyn man has suggested to the clubwomen of the New York City federation a hat-pin protector that seems better adapted to the purpose than most that have been presented for the hat-pin show, which will be made by the society next month. He says that he has made a study of the subject, having encountered many pins in the subway.
